Campus Party Utrecht

Campus Party is one of the world's biggest tech festivals. It will take place from May 25-29, 2016 in Utrecht, the Netherlands. The global phenomenon will be attended by students, tech fans, innovators and geeks from all over the world. Participants – called Campuseros – work together for five days, 24 hours a day, actively contributing to solutions for future challenges in workshops and hackathons. They are joined by organizations and individuals at the cutting edge of technology. This year, the line-up includes a Nobel Prize Laureate and Hyperloop developers.

Campuseros spend the night in Jaarbeurs, Utrecht, in a special hall with 5,000 tents. They will be able to enhance their skills during multiple workshops and will be inspired by international keynote speakers. Dirk Ahlborn from Hyperloop Transportation Technologies, Nobel Prize winner Dan Shechtman, CEO of Fairphone Bas van Abel, Camille François of the Berkman Center for Internet & Society of Harvard University and Matthew Reyes from GoPro NASA are just a few of the names speaking at the event. Exciting technologies will also be exhibited, including 3D printing, virtual reality and robotics. Also, there will be a wide variety of digital entertainment in the form of game tournaments, drone races and cosplay.
